Combining the (not so clear) contents of two tables using php and mysql I'm stuck, really stuck. I really need some help and guidance with this as I'm trying for days now and still can't get it to work.

I would appreciate any suggestion, clue or comment! If I have the following tables in my database: table 'nodes' id n1 n2 n3 n4 n5 n6 n7 table 'links' id l1 l2 I can collect and print out the two tables as such: $id = $node[id]; $links = $node->getLinks(); foreach($links as $l => $lt){ $id = $l; $links = $node->getLinks(); foreach($links as $l => $lt){ echo 'url.'>'; echo $lt->name.'; } } And then I can have it print the corresponding text inside the 'links' table, as it's a one-to-many relationship, between the two tables. But what I really need is to have the 'links' table print out the text of the nodes that are combined into a single node (i.e. It will still have the same number of columns as the 'links' table, but will still have only a single row). I also need to be able to select whichever node I want from the 'links' table (using the 'id') and then print its corresponding data in the 'nodes' table. A: If I'm understanding correctly you want to output node data like this, [1] --> [1] --> [1] [2] --> [2] instead of [
